Stephen Engle is the Managing Partner of the San Francisco office of Engle, Lindsley & Regan.

Over the last 16 years, he has placed dozens of partners and associates at law firms and corporations and has counseled hundreds of attorneys with regard to career development. He created and implemented a novel presentation to help law students choose their practice area, which he has delivered to students at Harvard, Yale, Stanford, Michigan and Berkeley. He has spoken at the NALP conference and at many conferences of local bar associations and professional recruiting organizations.

Stephen received a J.D. magna cum laude from Harvard Law School in 1997, where he served as the Books and Commentaries Editor of the Harvard Law Review. After law school, he clerked for Judge Levin H. Campbell on the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit. He practiced law for four years at a boutique law firm in San Francisco. Prior to his legal career, he earned an M.F.A. in theater from the University of Southern California and a B.A. (magna cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa) in mathematics from Middlebury College. For eight years, Stephen was a professional actor in New York City and Los Angeles. Among his many roles, he played an attorney on the soap opera As the World Turns.
